The original layout to this kitchen was small, and it was separated by walls from the rest of the living space, making the home seem dark and cluttered. Jackson Design & Remodeling created an inviting, colorful kitchen where the homeowners could entertain large groups. The new layout includes a dining area, a kitchen with a bar area and an open living area. The tile floor is made of durable material that looks like wood, while notes of glamour are included, from the sparkling metallic tiles interspersed through the flooring, to the dramatic designer range hood.

Bathroom over $60,000 | Foxcraft Design Group, Inc. | Falls Church, VA

The original bathroom's entrance was hampered by boxy walk-in closets to the right and left and a partition wall. The old vanities were short and there was no storage space. Foxcraft Design Group opened the entry by combining the closets on the left side and using Shoji screens to allow natural light to filter through from the skylight and window. The vanities were moved so they didn't block access to the toilet and shower. The large curbless shower has controls at the entrance to allow for temperature adjustment before entering water.
